SECOND GENERATION

1- JOHN WAKEFIELD, the immigrant ancestor of the Boston Family, was born in England in 1614-15. He was according to the best information at hand, a native of Gravesend, county Kent, England, as Thomas Wakefield, probably his brother, came from that town which was an ancient seat of this family. Thomas embarked in the ship "America" William Barker, Master, June 23, 1635 for Virginia and it is evident that John went to the same locality about the same time, but prior to 1647, as he was at Martha's Vineyard before that date. He had a grant of land there, but failed to fulfill the terms, he forfeited it, and it was re-granted to Nicholas Butler. John was a boatman or shipwright and owned a half interest in one old boat and one new boat at the time of his death, and it is likely that he was engaged in coast trading. He hept up some relations with his brother in Maryland.(Thomas) He took up his residence in Boston prior to 1651, and bought a tract of land on the south side of Middle street (now Hanover) extending from the corner of what is now Prince Street to within ninety feet of the street now named Richmond, and to the rear from Middle Street, one hundred eighty four and one-half feet, reaching nearly to North square and North Street. Through the center of this lot, nearly at right angles with Middle Street, he opened a narrow lane or alley, making the entire estate accessible from Middle street. For more than a century it was known as Wakefield's alley, and in colonial days was the site of the homes of prominent and historic personages of the town.
Wakefield was thrifty and fairly prosperous, but he had some serious set backs. His house was struck by lightening March 9, 1664 and badly damaged. He was fined March 30, 1659 for entertaining a Quaker or "stranger". He was killed while helping the ropemaker, July 19, 1667 and was buried in the Granary burying ground, a short distance west of the Franklin tomb, and the inscription on the stone, the oldest in the yard, is still ledgible. He died inestate and his wife Ann was administratrix. She married secondly John Childs, a tailor of Boston, and on the back of Wakefield's grave stone is inscribed an eiptaph to Childs, who died April 3, 1703, aged about eighty years.

12- JOHN WAKEFIELD (John[2]) was born in Maryland or Edgartown, Mass.[1] about 1640; he was a shipwright. He removed to Boston prior to 1651 with his parents, about 1663 he built a house on his father's homestead on Middle street (now Hanover), extending his possessions by inheritance at his father's death. He lived and died in his house which was afterward occupied by his wife until her death. He was choosen hogreeve, March 15, 1674-75. A fire broke out November 27, 1676 in his house and caused a conflagration in which forty five houses were destroyed, also the North Meeting House and several warehouses. But for rain and achange in the wind all that end of the town and probably Charlestown, also would have been burned. The distric was laid out by the selectmen and streets straightened after the fire. Wakefield was an assistant to manage the fire engine in 1678, subscribed to the almshouse fund in 1685, and was tithingman. He was of Captain Terrill's company in the Ancient and Honorable Artillery. He died in March 1703. His will dated October 18, 1698, and proved March 14, 1703 or 1704. The widow died in January 1716-17, and her son John was administrator.

321- THOMAS WAKEFIELD (Joseph, John, John, John) was born in Boston, Mass. August 5, 1727 the only son of Joseph and Copia Bridge Love Wakefield; married March 24, 1750 Dorcas Pratt the daughter of Timothy and Tabitha Boutwell Pratt, granddaughter of John and Sarah Pratt. Her father lived "side the pond" on the easterly side of what is now called Main Street in Wakefield, in what was called the old Harrison house. Thomas Wakefield succeeded to his homestead, which is now owned by Charles Wakefield. Thomas upon the death of his mother or the following year was taken by his father to the home of Doctor Abraham Gould of Stoneham, on the road between Stoneham and South Reading (now Wakefield to be cared for. According to family tradition he was after a time taken home, but Mrs. Gould had become so attached to the child that she could not live without him and he was allowed to return to her house, remaining until he was old enough to learn a trade, when he was bound out to William Beard, then living near the Parker Pratt house on Haverhill street Reading to learn the carpenter trade. It was stipulated in the papers that he should not be fed on beans and that he should have sugar on his puddings; Thomas resided in Reading until 1756-57, when he removed with his family to Souhegan (West Amherst, N.H.) where he lived the remainder of his days. He was a selectman, town clerk, taking a prominent part in Revolutionary affairs, and performing other important duties at Amherst, N. H. He was an honest, upright and respected citizen; he died Sept. 1791. His widow returned to Reading to live and died there in November 25, 1802, aged 77 years.

652- JOSEPH WAKEFIELD (Thomas, Joseph, John, John, John) was born at Reading, Mass. May 9, 1752 the second son of Thomas and Dorcas Pratt Wakefield; married November 5, 1777 Relief, daughter of John and Hannah Kendall of Dunstable, Mass., who was born May 9, 1753 and died in Jefferson county New York March 17, 1837.

In 1774 Thomas Wakefield deeded real estate to Joseph Wakefield in Amherst county of Hillsborough, Provience of New Hampshire, and the deed was witnessed by William Wakefield. He was living at A mherst, N. H. on becoming of age, and on April 23, 1775 he enlisted in Captain Crosby's company of Colonel Reed's regt., and took part in the Battle of Bunker Hill.

Joseph made his residence in Deering, N.H., during 1776 and 1777, and he is amoung the signers of the Declaration of the inhabitants of N.H., April 12, 1776 from Deering, to oppose the hostile proceedings of the British fleets and Armies against the United American Colonies; in response to the resolve of the Continental Congress March 14, 1776, sitting at Philadelphia.

At or about the close of the Revolutionary War, he removed to Winsdor, Vermont, where he resided until his death June 1827.

He was an honest, upright man, who dispised hypocrisy and whose religion was of the dailey kind, consisting more of good than of loud words.

Tradition states that Joseph was a very mild, pleasant man, one who always found friends, though not very energetic for business; his wife Relief, however was all energy and thrift.

1186- WILLIAM WAKEFIELD (Ebenezer, Samuel, Ebenezer, Samuel, John)

was born in Wardsboro, Vermont December 4, 1809 the fourth son of Ebenezer and Bethany Smith Wakefield; married December 31, 1835 Nancy Whitaker the youngest daughter of William T. and Eunice Smith Whitaker, He resided near Rome, New York from 1837-1852; 1852 he moved to Virginia on a farm which he purchased at Occoquan, here he lived for six years or until the feeling of unfriendliness became intense between the North and the South and he deamed it advisable to leave Virginia; he traded his farm to a Southerner who was in a similar position in the North for a farm on Long Island, New York. He resided there but a short time, disposed of his farm and moved to Clinton Twp., Illinois and settled upon eighty acres which he purchased of his eldest son George. While his son was in the army from 1862 to 1865 he operated his son's farm with his own. After the close of the war and his son returned, he sold his eighty acres back to his son for which he received the increase in value, without having paid a dollar down on the purchase price. From the farm he moved to Paw Paw a short distance from Clinton Twp., residing there until 1877 and finally moving to Kansas where he died March 17, 1885; Nancy lived two years longer and died June 27, 1887; both are buried near Wilsey, Kansas.

Bancroft of Revolutionary War fame; he became one of the most successful business men of New England; his early boyhood was spent on the farm; mentally alert, he made rapid progress in the district school, a mile and a half from his home. At the age of fifteen years he went to Boston, Mass., and began a business career, which eventually through various experiences, resulted in the establishment of a nation wide and practically world-wide trade in rattan. By his interest and benefactions he contributed so largely to the Welfare of South Reading, Mass., that on July 4, 1868 with appropriate exercises the name of the town was changed to "Wakefield". He was a man of indomitable courage and energy.
At his death the town adopted the following resolution:

> "The valuable citizen, the prosperous merchant, the progressive and intellectual leader of ornamental and architectual improvements, the friend and helper of education, the chief promoter of our local, noble industrial pursuits, our magnificent namesake whose numerous and generous benefactions will remain his enduring memorials".

He died October 26, 1873, without issue at the age of sixty two years.

101- DAVID WAKEFIELD (Robert, Robert, Albert, John) was born near

Aughrim, Galaway Co., Ireland the eldest son of Robert and Wakefield; married Mary Jane, daughter of Jeremiah Wade a wealthy landed proprietor, and neighbor of the Wakefield family, in Galaway county, Ireland;
David Wakefield emigrated to America between 1768 and 1773; according to tradition he was implicated with his brothers in the plot against Catholic rule in Ireland, and when detected, David was hid by his wife in a hogshead of clothes, with which she embarked on an American bound vessel, and was three days out at sea before the captain of the ship knew that he was on board ship; by this means he escaped to America; upon his arrival, he first settled in Path Valley, situated between Tuscarora and Conechocheaque mountains, in Perry county, then Cumberland County Penn., where some of the younger children were born; after residing there for some fifteen or sixteen years, he settled on the north of the Conemaugh, opposite Squirrel Hill, then in Cumberland County, but now in Indiana County, and where the village of Centerville now is; after remaining there for some two years, finding the title to the land was defective, they again removed, five miles northwest, to near the head of the west branch of Richard's Run in Wheatfield township, some time between the years 1788 and 1794, where they remained and where David died, and is buried, no gravestone marking the place; After his death, his widow went to live with her eldest daughter, Joanna, who married William Caroll and resided in the Wolf Creek Settlement, in Mercer County, where she died;
